Excerpt from The Demand and Price Situation: June 1950 May, and in early June the industry was producing at the rate of million units a year, by far the highest on record. Nondurable goods output in May established a new high of point above the previous peak. Further expansion in scms industries in early June foreshadowed an even higher level of total nondurable goods production in that month. Industries showing advances in May from April levels were textiles and products, petroleum and coal products, chemicals and rubber. Most other groups maintained output at the high April rates.
