Red Salamander Press, United States, 2013. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.A blend of absurdist and traditional realist fiction, these twelve tales offer an extended meditation on suffering and the loss of meaning in our modern world - a world in which characters often find themselves subject to forces over which they have little control. In The Tub, for instance, a young community college instructor wakes to discover that his fate is tied to the fluctuating water level of a tub in his backyard. In The Target, nature suddenly turns against a quiet tax advisor, and the simple life he once enjoyed rapidly dissolves. In We Really Do Have a Hell of a Dean, an anthropology professor feels compelled to fly in cannibals, a woman who breastfeeds animals, and boys who snack on tarantulas to keep his students from texting during class. And in Goad s First Visit, God turns up in the form of a wildebeest to inform poor Irk that he will be the first of his creatures to receive a soul.
